THE PROTECTION FROM HARASSMENT ACT 1997

AN EVALUATION OF ITS USE AND EFFECTIVENESS

HARASSMENT LAW AND PRACTICE

Blackstone Press Offering an examination of harassment, this work looks at such areas as the common law harassment, the civil and criminal provisions of the Protection from Harassment Act 1997, the domestic violence provisions of the Family Law Act 1996, and the anti-social neighbour injunctions under the Housing Act 1996, and includes the provisions of the 1998 Crime and Disorder Bill. The inter-relationships between the various remedies and their respective advantages and disadvantages are explained. Examples are given of various types of harassment: racial, sexual, in the workplace or from neighbours, journalists or stalkers. All the relevant legislation and case law is provided together with precedents and checklists.

DOMESTIC VIOLENCE AND PROTECTION FROM HARASSMENT

THE NEW LAW

Jordan Publishing (GB) This second edition includes changes to the law, such as: the Family Proceedings (Amendment) Rules and New Forms; the Protection from Harassment Act 1997, offering an explanation of the new civil remedies in tort available to victims of harassment, which came into force in June 1997; and the Housing Act 1996, explaining changes which give social landlords the power to evict violent partners and rehouse victims of domestic violence.

THE LAW OF PERSONAL PRIVACY

Hart Pub Limited The laws protecting personal privacy in England and Wales have evolved over many years, and until quite recently were derived from diverse sources, including the law of confidence, copyright, trespass, the European Convention on Human Rights, and statutes such as the Protection from Harassment Act 1997, the Human Rights Act 1998, and the Data Protection Act 1998. Prior to the implementation of the Human Rights Act the traditional law of confidence had developed incrementally, and there was much confusion about whether the origin of the law lay in equity or in tort. The purpose of this book is to analyse the new law which has evolved rapidly since the passage of the Human Rights Act, applying a new methodology and language to the modern legal and media landscape. In particular the effect of the internet is considered in some detail, since it is now an enormously important means of instant communication, via websites and email. In addition there is detailed consideration to the issues and remedies concerning street photography and how far the claims for misuse of private information and harassment can be applied to "public areas". The new methodology rests upon a claim for 'misuse of private information'; the new claim is significantly different from the law concerning commercial confidences, in its nature, scope and application and the various defences that may be available. It is therefore not the purpose of this book to analyse the traditional law of confidence, but to focus entirely upon the law concerning the misuse of private information. The authors, all highly experienced practitioners in the fields of human rights and media law, have between them appeared in many of the modern English cases on privacy.

DOMESTIC VIOLENCE

(PART IV FAMILY LAW ACT 1996 AND PROTECTION FROM HARASSMENT ACT 1997)

This publication offers a summary of current legislation and official government guidance relating to domestic violence. It should be of use to social workers, probation officers and other concerned professionals to inform and facilitate effective action to assist those experiencing domestic violence.

DOMESTIC VIOLENCE AND PROTECTION FROM HARASSMENT

Jordans Pub A few years have elapsed since the implementation of Part IV of the Family Law Act 1996 and the Protection from Harassment Act 1997, and many significant cases have now been decided. This volume explains the legal principles in the light of these developments, in particular their importance on powers of arrest. The issues of which order is appropriate, what is the relevant procedure and how an order should be enforced are analyzed in detail. In addition, the author examines the likely impact of the Human Rights Act 1998 upon the court's powers.

MARKESINIS AND DEAKIN'S TORT LAW

Oxford University Press Fully updated to cover developments including the Protection from Harassment Act 1997, the Human Rights Act, Regina vs. Ireland, and Regina vs. Burstow, this book provides comprehensive commentary on tort law. The authors provide a variety of comparative and economic perspectives upon the area.

SOCIAL MEDIA AND CRIMINAL OFFENCES

1ST REPORT OF SESSION 2014-15

Stationery Office The Select Committee on Communications reports that legislation currently in existence, including the Communications Act 2003 and the Protection from Harassment Act 1997, along with the guidelines for applying them published by the Director of Public Prosecutions, are enough to ensure that criminal offences committed using social media can be adequately prosecuted. However, the Committee is calling for more clarity from the Director of Public Prosecutions as to when an indecent communication (e.g. 'revenge porn') could - and should - be subject to prosecution under existing powers. It is also encouraging website operators such as Facebook and Twitter to speed up requests for identification of users from law enforcement agencies, using powers already granted by Parliament. The Committee is also calling for better statistics on the balance of offences committed online and by traditional means, as well as the number of offences that are actually reported. Parents and schools must also realise the extent of the problem. They need to make sure that children are taught - at home and in school - that offensive behaviour online is just as wrong as it would be to do it face-to-face.

TORTS

Cases - digests of many leading decisions. Statutes (updated) - extracts from statutes including the Unfair Contract Act 1977; Highways Act 1980; Occupiers' Liability Act 1984; Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984; Latent Damage Act 1986; Consumer Protection Act 1987; Road Traffic Act 1988; Human Fertilization and Embryology Act 1990; Courts and Legal Services Act 1990; Broadcasting Act 1990; Environmental Protection Act 1990; Water Resources Act 1991; Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992; Damages Act 1996; Defamation Act 1996; Social Security (Recovery of Benefits) Act 1997 (Protection from Harassment Act 1997).

SOURCEBOOK ON TORT LAW 2/E

Cavendish Publishing The purpose of this book is to provide a clear guide to tort law, examining the main principles and areas of the subject. It includes text emphasizing the main issues of liability. The text incorporates relevant materials, extracts from leading judgments, articles and reports of review bodies on tort law. It should prove especially useful for those who do not have access to a law library, as for those whose library is under severe pressure from users. It will be useful to those participating in seminars and tutorials and will enable them to take part in a good level of discussion. This new edition of Sourcebook on Torts has been fully revised and incorporates the Human Rights Act 1998. The effect of the European Courts decision in Osman is now being felt, as is evident from the judgments of the House of Lords in Barrett v Enfield BC. The Law Commission's proposals on liability for psychiatric illness are included. Developments in the tort of nuisance, the defence of qualified privilege and damages are also scrutinized. Several Law Commission reports and the Social Security (Recovery of Benefits) Act 1997 are also extracted, as are other new pieces of legislation, such as the Damages Act 1996 and the Defamation Act 1996.

BANKRUPTCY ABUSE PREVENTION AND CONSUMER PROTECTION ACT OF 2005, APRIL 8, 2005, 109-1 HOUSE REPORT NO. 109-31, PART 1, *

LANDLORD AND TENANT LAW

This is an introductory text for students of law and related business and professional courses, and for those practitioners starting out in property management. Summaries, exercises and workshops concluding each chapter help the reader to make sense of a complex area of law. This fully revised fourth edition centres initially on the general law of leases, their contractual nature and the interests and obligations which a lease creates. The second part of the book explores the protection afforded to tenants by statute. This includes residential accommodation, as well as agricultural and business lettings. The Protection from Harassment Act 1997 and other developments are discussed, along with an examination of the consequences of long term legislation implemented in the 1990s, whose effects are only now becoming clear.

DOMESTIC VIOLENCE, CRIME AND VICTIMS BILL (HL)

HOUSE OF LORDS BILLS 2003-04,6

Domestic violence accounts for a quarter of all recorded violent crime in England and Wales. The Government's consultation paper 'Safety and justice' (Cm 5847, ISBN 0101584725) published in June 2003, contained proposals designed to improve legal and other protections available to victims of domestic violence. This Bill is in three parts and applies generally to England and Wales (with some clauses applicable to Northern Ireland and others throughout the UK). It contains provisions to introduce civil and criminal law reforms in these areas by criminalising the breach of non-molestation orders under the Family Law Act 1996, extending the availability of restraining orders under the Protection from Harassment Act 1997, and making common assault an arrestable offence. It also seeks to introduce a new offence of causing or allowing a death of a child or vulnerable adult. Procedural measures set out circumstances in which a Crown Court judge may hear part of a trial on indictment without a jury. It also contains provisions to establish a code of practice regarding service provision to victims and witnesses of crime, the creation of a Commissioner for Victims and Witnesses, and statutory payments of grants to bodies which assist victims and witnesses.
