Lectures on Commercial Law are now given every winter in many of our large towns. These lectures attract bankers, accountants, and young business men. The want of a text-book has long been felt, as the existing works are too advanced for practical use. In writing this work I have aimed at brevity and simplicity of statement. As a rule cases are not quoted, but many of the illustrations embodied in the text are taken from decided cases. At the end of each chapter or part, reference is made to the leading text-books, to which the reader is referred for further information. As the book is written mainly for those who are unfamiliar with legal terms, I have added a glossary of some terms used in the text that seemed on reading the proofs to require explanation. I have to express my grateful thanks to Dr. James Gow, the editor of the series, Mr. William Baker of Lincoln's Inn, and Mr. J. It is not intended for lawyers and law students, but mainly for business men, and students desirous of obtaining the rudiments of this vast topic, not that they might there by act as their own lawyer, but by having this knowledge they may better appreciate the importance of calling in a lawyer at the proper time and thus avoid blunders occasioning great annoyance and expense. The practical questions at the end of each lesson have been gathered from actual cases decided by the courts of various jurisdiction, from questions given at different examinations for the C. P. A. Degree, and others have been arranged by the author. It can readily be seen that these questions cannot be answered unless the text has been thoroughly mastered. The author has not hesitated to avail himself of the many authorities on the various subjects covered in this volume, and is under vast obligation to them for the help which he has received in the use of their books.
